

Gender / Race / Empire

A collective digital archive created by a group of interdisciplinary undergraduate students. Inspired by our reading, writing, and discussions centered on Gender, Race, and Empire, a course held in the Department of History at Willamette University.

Please direct inquires to bmurillo@willamette.edu

Akala on Britain's inherent xenophobia - Frankie Boyle's Election Autopsy 2015

#ifyouforgotaboutempire

Jun 29, 2016

Chimamanda Adichie & Zadie Smith on Race, Writing, & Relationships

prepaidafrika:

Why the young and talented are returning to Ghana

For the current generation, moving home has little to do with making parents or grandparents proud. Rather, it reflects a relative lack of opportunity for young people in their adopted home job markets. This repatriation is mirrored in other countries too, such as India, where a whole generation are being lured back driven by waning opportunities for them in developed economies.